PHOTOS ON PILOT CERTIFICATES ONE STEP CLOSER - from EAA Hotline

The FAA announced November 17 it is proposing that all pilot certificates include photos of the certificate holder. The proposal calls for all new airman certificates and flight instructor certificates to include a photograph. Existing private, recreational, or sport pilot certificate holders would have five years to comply with the new requirement. Existing pilots with a current commercial pilot certificate would have four years to comply, while a pilot with an airline transport pilot rating would have three years to obtain a new certificate with a photo. The new pilot certificate would cost $22.

(I better get my photo now, because I am not getting any better looking.)
